The most valuable aspect of art is its ability to humanize us. Art is an antidote in times of chaos, it is the roadmap when we can't see our way, the power to survive and repair, it is the new record, the new language and our new images to think about.

Artists; They are explorers, healers, activists and visionaries. Art is the potential force required to dream with new realities and ultimately change the world. Art, which is possible under any circumstances, even during the quarantine period, depends on the visual arts sector, audiences, relationships and contacts. When these are suspended, the ability to continue creative practice is also suspended.

The pandemic still exists globally. However, art enabled us to communicate at a distance by creating positivity, appreciation and hope during the quarantine. In the pandemic, humanity turned to art as a source of relaxation and empowerment. With the internet at our fingertips, accessing art has become easier and more important than ever.

Participating in and watching art has become what allows us to connect to a universal human experience and not only understand ourselves but also understand each other more deeply.

As Trakya University Faculty of Fine Arts, we planned an international exhibition called "Pandemic Inspirations" on April 15th, World Art Day. The artists who will participate in the exhibition must have made their works during the pandemic period. Thus, the works created with the inspiration of the pandemic period will be exhibited in the virtual gallery of our Faculty and brought to the audience. At the end of the exhibition, the participation documents and the exhibition catalog in pdf format will be sent to the participants via e-mail. We thank all the artists who will participate in the exhibition and wish them success in their art work ...
